Backstage at the Geffen title sponsor City National Bank, returning for the fifth year, was joined by presenting sponsors Audi of America and Social by Samantha Sackler and Tammy Ratner with special thanks to UCLA and The Walt Disney Co.

Event Highlights:

• Let the Show Begin - To the strains of Pharrell Williams mega hit “Happy,” dancers opened the show in a foot-stomping number conceived by “So You Think You Can Dance” choreographers Tabitha and Napoleon D’umo.

• Bring on the Laughs - Host Steve Carell regaled the audience with his version of how honorees Steve Martin and Alan Horn first met … as the vaudeville team of “Martin and Horn.” Carell’s hilarious “biographical” journey through the years was accompanied by on screen photos of the supposed duo superimposed on the faces of legendary teams ranging from Laurel and Hardy to circa 60’s Studio 54 clubbers.

• Break a Leg – Sean Hayes proved that that some of your biggest disasters can be your greatest stories. Case in point, as a failed stagehand in an early school production, his notorious “klutziness” resulted in his first award … “The Golden Crutch.” Bounding onto the stage, he lived up to his reputation, by tripping and knocking out the tooth of his fellow classmate who was presenting him the award.

• Music to our Ears – Anna Kendrick moved the audience with her rendition of “Being Alive” from Stephen Sondheim’s “Company.” Kendrick is currently filming the motion picture version of the Sondheim musical Into the Woods with Chris Pine, a Geffen Playhouse alum.

• Where it all Began – Jennifer Garner reminisced about her days as an intern in summer stock, where she told a great story about her mentor in theatre and learning a tough lesson about how the show must always go on.
• And the Award Goes To ... Alan Horn – Daughters Cody and Cassidy Horn spoke fondly of their father before introducing Rob Reiner. Reiner noted that he had the privilege of incorporating a story he was told at a party by Alan Horn’s father, Saul. The senior Horn had told Reiner of how he had met his wife 41 years earlier. It was such a touching story, that it was the catalyst for the opening of “When Harry Met Sally.”

• Surprise! - Award winning composer/musician Mason Williams, responsible for setting a young performer, Steve Martin, on his road to stardom as a writer on the “Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour,” surprised the honoree as his special guest presenter. Mason began with a performance of his 1968 mega-hit “Classical Gas.” As Martin said, he appreciated the plaque, “but would have preferred a trophy.” Martin premiered the first play that he had written at the Geffen playhouse, “Picasso at the Lapin Agile,” in 1993.

• Dining with the Stars – Honorees, special guests and the event’s Host Committee enjoyed a pre-event dinner in a giant tent designed by Social & Designer 8 erected directly across the street from the Geffen Playhouse. Catered by Ronen Levy Events, it featured Double Cross Vodka Cocktails, Malibu Family Wines and Source Water, also part of the pre-show reception at the Playhouse.

• Arriving in Style – Guests were greeted at the foot of the red carpet by a 2014 Audi R8 V10 Spyder noted for its explosive performance and exotic presence.

• Sweet Ending - After the show, guests indulged in desserts ranging from Deluscious Cookies with shots of milk to a My Vienna Gelato bar, Richard Ruskell Pastries, Gotta Have S’mores, and Pure Cheesecakes along with contributions from Seasons 52 and Ronen Levy Events.
