TONY AWARD WINNER ALAN CUMMING
RETURNS TO THE GEFFEN PLAYHOUSE

Cumming’s Acclaimed Cabaret Show Returns to the Intimate Audrey Skirball Kenis Theater
Eight Shows Only From Sunday Dec 13 - Friday Dec 18

LOS ANGELES, Nov 13, 2009 — Following a sold-out run a few months ago, Tony Award winner Alan Cumming brings his rockin' cabaret show back to the Geffen Playhouse for eight shows only from Sunday, December 13 to Friday, December 18. Garnering rave reviews across the globe, Alan Cumming: I Bought a Blue Car Today is a fast-paced jaunt that intersperses witty banter, cheeky stories and show-stopping songs. Joined on stage by musical director Lance Horne and his fantastic musicians, Cumming belts material from Frank Sinatra to Kander & Ebb with his signature charm. This time around, Cumming and his team are including something a little extra to help ring in the holidays.

Once again, the evening will be played in the intimate 135-seat Audrey Skirball Kenis Theater, where Cumming's personal stories take on the tone of a delicious secret told at a private dinner party – assuming your dinner guests happen to be Tony Award winning performers backed up by a four-piece band.

The title, I Bought a Blue Car Today, comes from the sentence that Cumming needed to write on his naturalization test to become a US citizen, which becomes the launch pad for one of the Scotsman's hilarious stories about his time in the US. Cumming’s solo debut album, which shares the same name as his cabaret show, features select songs from the show including material from Hedwig and the Angry Inch, Chess and Falsettos as well as original material written by Cumming and Horne. With I Bought a Blue Car Today, Alan Cumming shows that life is indeed a cabaret.

Tickets, which range from $65 - $85, are on sale to the public now through the Geffen box office.
